The Rules

Play: Go is played on a board with 9x9, 13x13, or 19x19 intersecting grid lines. Two players, first with black stones, then white, alternate placing a stone on empty grid intersections. The goal is to control as much territory as possible.

Groups: Stones of the same color that touch along grid lines are considered a group.

Stones don't move: Once placed, a stone does not move around the board, but it can be captured.

Capture: A stone or group of stones surrounded along every grid line is removed from the board.

End: The game ends when white passes after black. Dead stones are removed from the board.

"Ko:" A move is not allowed if it would repeat a previous whole-board position, thus avoiding infinite loops.

Score: Capture dead stones, add controlled empty intersections, then subtract opponent-held capture stones. The remainder is your score.
